Mountain View Country Club

This challenging, mountain golf course was designed and built in 1900 by Ralph Barton, a professor of Mathematics at Dartmouth College and renowned golf architect of the early 20th Century.

The course was renovated in 1999, when extensive work to the greens, teeing areas and course hazards allowed it to recapture its original grandeur. The course sits on a beautiful country hillside affording fabulous views of four distinct mountain ranges. The rating for men is 67.3 and for women 71.9, while the slope of the course is 112.

Golfers will delight in this challenging mountain course with impressive natural terrain features and impeccable playing conditions. The golf course is complemented with an impressive clubhouse complete with a well-appointed lounge, café, poolside snack bar, locker rooms with saunas, as well as tennis and lawn games court, a fabulous children’s play area, an Olympic-size heated outdoor swimming pool and a relaxing hot tub overlooking the mountains.
